Dear Friends and Fans,

A Smile Takes Away Some of the Stress of the Previous day, the wise always say that. In the olden days, our Elders in the villages used Folktales, Games, Songs and Proverbs to Educate the community on an virtues (Abrabo Pa) and vices (Abrabo Bone). For some of us, Tradition is still alive,for others, we are in modern world so anything connected to culture is archaic and outdated. But is the reality honest with our daily experience in life? The challenges from these, is the reason why we need experts to share words of wisdom for social change impact. Today, we welcome our family member, Dr. Elvis. He is a final year Business Administration Undergraduate student at the nation of wealth, Kwahu's educational pride, the Presbyterian University and a staff of the Ghanaian non-profit, the Centre for Human Development and Social Change, Ghana aka CHDSCGhana. He shares with us: The Wine "Tolli".

Read on:

Ikemefuna is a house-boy who drinks his Boss' wine with impunity then adds water to cover his tracks. His boss became suspicious and decided to buy Pasties (a French wine that changes color if you add water-just like Dettol). Unaware of this, Ikemefuna drank the wine as usual and topped it up with water.

Immediately he added water, the Pasties became milky and he knew he was in trouble. When the boss came back and saw the changed Pasties, he knew he had nailed Ikemefuna. Ikemefuna, knowing he was in trouble, decided to stay put in the kitchen when his boss came home. The Boss, having told his wife what he observed, now swung into action.

"Ikemefuna!" he called from the sitting room.

Ikemefuna answered: "Yes, Boss."

"Who drank my pasties?"

Ikemefuna: No answer.

So the Boss went to the kitchen to meet him there: "Are you insane or what? Why when I call, you say "Yes, Boss", but when I ask you a question you don't answer me?"

Ikemefuna retorted, "Hmmm, Oga. When you are in the kitchen you don't hear anything at all, except your name."

"Is that so?" asked the Boss, "Okay, go to the bar stand beside Madam, while I go into the kitchen. And then, you ask me a question."

Ikemefuna accepted. When his Boss was in the Kitchen he shouts, "Boss."

"Yesss, Ikem!" Boss answers.

Ikemefuna then asks, "Who goes into the maid's bedroom when Madam is not at home?"

No answer.

Ikemefuna shouts again: "Boss, I say who dey sneak into the maid's room when Madam no dey house?"

No answer.

The Boss runs back from the kitchen shouting, "Wonders shall never cease! Ikemefuna, it is true ooo-when one is in the kitchen, one does not hear anything except one's name."

The wife, now very angry, interrupts, "That's not true. It's a lie! Without a doubt."

Ikemefuna asks if she'll enter the magic kitchen to test it. She agrees.

Ikemefuna asks, "Madam, who is Junior's biological father? Me or the Boss?"

Madam rushed out of the kitchen. "This Kitchen needs to be fumigated ooo! I can't hear anything at all...."

COMMENTS:

How do you like it? The World Today is inundated with so much lies that nobody is telling the truth anymore. You might say, as for me I don't lie. Probably, Yes but please take time to Learn from this simple Tolli, and how it can go a long way to impact your life. Today's World is being digitized making it possible for all sorts of social interactions. As you enjoy this social media advantages, what contents do you share with your friends and audience? Are majority make up stories? For those of you on Social Media sites such as Facebook, YouTube, Ning, Google+, Tweeter, Black Planet, My Space, Flickr, Yahoo, Live etc, are you being honest with yourself? Are your intentions genuine for being on these sites or you are just there with some malicious one?

For those of you in Politics, are you living up to expectations or you are living large on LIE GLORY? What about you the Accountant who is also an elder in that big church. You have 3 mansions, one in Accra, Kumasi and your hometown. Did you build all of that with your meager salary from your work? Like Burning Spear, a great reggae icon says in his track, HONEST, "Be Honest With Yourself," Let's all try and make Mr. Truth our friend today. Be blessed Everybody.
